Transparency Report April 2019

MN019

Growth is slowly returning compared to March

Main take-aways of the month:

- Growth in the count of masternodes is back, after a couple of months with slow growth due to deposits almost being offset by a few large withdrawals.

- Deposits for April amounted to 2.656 Dash compared to 1.878 Dash in March, while the average withdrawal size fell to almost half in April compared to March (16 Dash compared to 29 Dash, respectively). As a result, we managed to start up two new masternodes in April.

- Deterministic masternode rewards were enabled by Spork 15 in the beginning of April.

- Since we updated 16 out of 17 masternodes on the same day, this has caused fractional payments to happen at the same day instead of being evenly spread out during the week.

Incidents:

- Along with the conversion to spork 15, 16 of the masternodes have reward payment within 24 hours, as we initially upgraded the masternodes in one day.
- Processing rewards, including calculation of fractional payments etc. have put extra pressure on the job engine. Jobs (calculations) have been processed in the right order, however, the job queue has been very long following multiple rewards. Thus some tasks were postponed, such as checking for fund balances.
- During our checks and balances for this transparency report, we identified that withdrawals totaling 30 Dash from four members were not properly processed and shown on the funds page, due to a backend outage on April 28th. Processing has now been completed and shows properly in accordance with the transactions.
- After the update to 0.13 our insights page has been really unstable. We are looking for a new block explorer that that can provide a stable solution.
